Information about COMS 4101 and the Comprehensive Examination

During the last semester of your senior year you will be required to register for COMS 4101. As part of this course, you will be taking a comprehensive examination which will cover much of the course content from your undergraduate COMS courses. We are notifying you of this before you start classes so you know to retain your notes and other course materials in preparation of your comprehensive examination.

Student Code of Ethics

Students enrolled in classes in the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders are expected to maintain the highest standards of integrity and ethical principles. The department subscribes to the American Speech and Language and Hearing Association code of Ethics and the Texas Woman's University Student Conduct Policies outlined in Section 5 of the TWU Student Handbook and expects students to adhere to these codes and policies. Students are advised to read and understand all sections of the ASHA Code of Ethics and the Student Handbook relating to standards of conduct and academic life.

Academic dishonesty, as defined by the TWU Student Handbook, "includes but is not limited to cheating, plagiarism, collusion, fabrication, falsification, falsifying academic records, or any other acts intentionally designed to provide an unfair advantage to the student and/or the attempt to commit such acts." Academic dishonesty may result in the immediate dismissal from the department and / or class. Depending on the nature of the defense, the department reserves the right to dismiss any student from the program.

I have read the above referenced Code of Ethics for the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders and agree to abide by them.
